

Hopkins Biotech Network

MISSION

The Hopkins Biotech Network is a student run organization that promotes education, career development, and networking in the field of biotechnology. We facilitate communication and build relationships between our members and the biotech industry.

FOUNDED

February 26, 2003

CHAPTERS

Homewood, East Baltimore, and Montgomery County campuses

MEMBERSHIP

Current membership stands at 1450 (May 2005)

JHU graduate students, undergraduate students, medical students, post-doctoral fellows, alumni, staff, and faculty

Non-JHU affiliated representatives from the biotech industry

SERVICES AND MEMBER BENEFITS

Educational:

- Seminar series featuring leaders in biotechnology and applied biosciences.
- Technology and company profiles posted on website.
- Bulletin of biotechnology related events and lectures in the region.
- Biotechnology news.

Networking and Career Development:

- Opportunity to interact with alumni, faculty and industry professionals.
- Access to career information and job postings.
- Monthly alumni interviews relating to career paths in biotechnology.
- Communication and exchange of information via message boards & events.

www.hopkinsbiotechnetwork.org