

Training Opportunity for Healthcare Professionals

Advanced Training for Field Deployment

Applications Due:
The application period is now closed

Enrollment is limited, please apply early!

The Johns Hopkins Center for Public Health Preparedness (CPHP) in collaboration with Office of Critical Event Preparedness and Response (CEPAR) is offering healthcare professionals an opportunity to participate in an advanced training course for field deployment readiness in response to disasters and public health emergencies.

This advanced training course aims to prepare individuals from a health professional background who are interested in or anticipate deployment in a field operational role.

Topics will include:

- Understanding Local, State and Federal Roles
- Public Health Law and Ethics for Volunteers
- What to Bring: Responder Equipment
- Disaster Communications
- Recognition and Countermeasures
- Decontamination, Personal Protective Equipment
- Clinical/ Public Health Assessment
- Casualty Simulation Lab
- Disaster Triage
- Symptom-Based Triage Algorithms
- Mass Casualty Triage

There is no charge for these training sessions.

For more information, please go to <http://www.jhsph.edu/preparedness/events/eventscalendar.html> or email cphp@jhsph.edu.

www.jhsph.edu/preparedness

www.hopkins-cepar.org