

DEADLINE EXTENDED TO 12/23/09!!!

SMALL GRANTS STILL AVAILABLE FOR WINTER AND SPRING 2010 PROJECTS

The Baltimore Food and Faith Project of the Johns Hopkins Center for a Livable Future is pleased to announce exciting grant opportunities for faith communities seeking to learn about our system of food production and distribution and to undertake projects aimed at making it more just, healthy, and sustainable.

Small grants are available for projects like:

-  Creating a congregational or parochial school food garden
-  Taking field trips to farms and other food-related sites
-  Participating in a local gleaning event to harvest food for the hungry
-  Purchasing curriculum and study materials to help people learn about how we produce and distribute food and how to make changes in this system
-  Hosting cooking, canning, or preserving classes
-  Helping you purchase fair-trade and other sustainably- and humanely-produced foods for educational and outreach events
