

Specialization in the Practice of Prevention

The practice of prevention focus examines specific public health problems such as AIDS, tobacco, obesity, and violence and develops strategies for addressing these problems through traditional and innovative policies. Students must complete the course requirements for the PhD in Health and Public Policy. In addition, the following two courses are recommended.

Recommended

305.607 Public Health Practice (4)

305.665 Public Health in Action: Case Studies in Public Health Practice and Mngt (2)