Volunteers are critical to the success of The Family Tree. Over 400 volunteers work in 11 different jobs. They educate and counsel parents and caregivers who are under stress, nurture children, help fathers become more involved in their children's lives, plan fundraisers and more. And they come to volunteer for many reasons. Some work with children professionally and understand the need for prevention. Others "just want to give back." And still others experienced abuse and neglect in their own lives and want to "save" a child.

Volunteers receive free training, a monthly newsletter, and the satisfaction of knowing they have made a difference in the lives of our most fragile children and families.
