Call for Abstracts!

Sex Differences Matter
Women’s Health & Drugs, Devices and Biologics
Wednesday, May 21, 2014 8:30AM-1:30PM
Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health, Feinstone Hall

Who Should Submit?
We invite students, resident physicians, post-doctoral fellows and junior faculty to submit original research in women’s health and sex differences. We especially welcome research related to drugs, devices and vaccines.

Women's health research addresses the physical, biological, mental and social context of well-being, health and disease of women. This multidisciplinary field addresses the biological as well as the social, political and economic context for women, often as compared with men. Abstracts that have been presented at other conferences may be submitted as long as the abstract has not been published by a peer-reviewed journal before the abstract submission due date.

Review Process:
Abstracts will be reviewed by an Abstract Review Committee. Notification of acceptance for oral or poster presentation, or rejection will be sent in early May.

For questions about abstract submissions, contact us at cdse@jhsph.edu or 410-502-2584.